The “Oeder” Gui
Hong Kong / International Antiques Fair / May 28th – 31st, 2016
The “Oeder” Gui

Early or middle Western Zhou dynasty, circa 10th century B.C.
I feel greatly privileged and singularly fortunate to be able to present to the art loving public this very important Chinese ritual bronze vessel gui which dates from the beginning of the Western Zhou dynasty (circa 10th century B.C.) and which was formerly in two well-known collections: the Oeder Collection and the MeiYintang Collection.

This exceptionally rare and beautiful masterpiece of the “Bronze Age” of China was, in antiquity, part of an original set which included two other similar, known gui, one of which is now in the Guimet Museum (Paris) and the other in the Rietberg Museum (Zurich).

In 1984, the present bronze gui was sold at auction in London, where I was the underbidder. After pursuing this magnificent, elusive masterpiece for 32 years, I am now happy to be able to say that it is mine.

I should like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who have helped me in the different stages in the preparation and production of this catalogue: Vincent Girier Dufournier, who has so skillfully photographed this exceptional object; René Bouchara, who has produced this catalogue; Ed O’Neill for his great help in the translation of the catalogue into English, and finally Clémence Artur, my assistant, who has supervised the whole process from beginning to end and has made it possible for me to present this superb catalogue.

Ritual bronze food vessel gui

Early or middle Western Zhou dynasty, circa 10th century BC.
西周早中期乳丁紋青銅簋

Height: 15.2 cm, Diameter: 21.8 cm, Diameter including handles: 27.5 cm
A ritual bronze vessel gui (簋), principally used to hold cooked rice, millet or sorghum. The body of the vessel, which is cast in the shape of a circular bowl, is supported on a high ring foot and has two large semi-circular lateral handles at its sides.

The decoration on the vessel’s bowl-shaped body is divided into two sections, a top narrow band embellished on each of the vessel’s sides with a deeply cast taotie mask (饕餮) flanked on each side by three deeply cast crested dragons (夔) separated by revolving flame motifs (繵文) and a second much wider lower section decorated with geometric patterns filled in their centres with boss motifs (乳丁紋). The vessel’s raised foot is decorated with a narrow band of silk-worm motifs (蠶紋) converging on a vertical flange at the band’s front centre.

The two handles, each issuing from a perfectly cast animal head, are decorated with long scroll patterns and end in a hooked flange. Bronze with a light water green patina.
